waterford fronts

the waterford front
a three year old
bright sunday best happy
saw me
slowed concerned
as they do
I smiled
she smiled
skipped past

granddad
worn tiger followed
this was no duty

I’d missed the galway train go to waterford it’s pretty the ticket girl had said the locals amused
you know her loyalty
but she’d a point

these are daughters I’d like that argument, after

you declared
yourself idiot

I use idiots
used you
got the poem

you’re the object used
used up

dog & sand

dog & sand
rising sun
filmic splash

I am in
the fastest train
a hundred feet beneath

walk the friend
sand to sea
sunlit ring

I am in
the fastest train

market wrung
ethic slum
logiciel

je suis en la grande vitesse

body bag bread monoculture beer

organic routes
malicious utilities

civilian trap
horseless guards

neighbourhood fear armoured islands

easy talk uncommon games
the problem is it’s just one colour now the colour’s fine as a colour but you might just stare at the black all night and wish for the evening’s amber dawn intention and the window glass you aim plausible

you destine disappoint

you aim impossible
you might delight
my father was a ufo

eating passengers for tea afore he went to bed
he ran the tale of me

my father was an aircraft ship his arm around the sea

my father was a hobbit dwarf making myth for thee

my father was the emperor of factory 63

my father was the counter–ghost he warmed the winds of plea

my father’s post computer from the singularity before he builds his birthing bed he’ll run the tale of me no pit is not no clay

dig deep dig dark

black flash black done

land flat calm sun

so you don’t like my disgust at you so I don’t like my disgust at you I can rationale it away but no pit is not no clay small lives

you just don't expect

my old cat’s
going to prison
but this time
i’m not sure
she’s coming back

i think that animal is the last shared thing i have
with my mother

in her final illness
she used to laugh
when that cat
snuggled in my arm
settled and purred

she’d creep to the top
i’d hardly notice
until the wet
crept through my shirt

cold dribble
in your armpit
the dead cat blues

lemme see a settee
a car seat
two antique chairs
a carry all
a backpack
a 14"
a 17"
and two 21"
CRT monitors

but lap warming
loyal—for a cat argumentative comforting purring in my ear—at 3am unjudging
unpedantic
unwilling to accept anyone else drooling & dribbling playful usually remembering about the claws fussy—well what cat isn’t heat seeking sun seeking she’s a cat
was
